I. Request for Direct Appellate Review

Pursuant to Mass. R. App. Pro. 11, Michael Wolfe hereby requests Direct Appellate Review of the judgment and sentence that entered against him below.

II. Statement of Prior Proceedings

On February 13, 2015, Mr. Wolfe was arraigned for OUI-Liquor, Marked Lanes Violation, and Motor Vehicle Equipment Violation. M.G.L. c. 90, §§ 7, 24(1)(a)(1); c. 89, § 4a. After a mistrial on January 6-7, 2016, on March 29 he was convicted of the OUI charge, found responsible for the Marked Lanes Violation, which was placed on file, and found not responsible on the Motor Vehicle Equipment charge. Add. 3-4.

Before the March 29 trial, the defendant's motions to exclude blood alcohol, field sobriety, and breathalyzer refusals and attempts was allowed. Add.5-8. After the trial, the judge gave a Downs instruction over the defendant's objection. T.125-27.

III. Short Statement of Facts Relevant to the Appeal

On February 13, 2015, Officer Pete Richardson of

the Marlborough Police Department was on routine patrol on Main Street in Marlborough when he spotted a Red Ford Explorer with its taillight out, which he decided to follow. T, 50, 52-53. Officer Richardson followed the Explorer for 5-10 minutes and observed it taking a left turn onto East Main Street, where it briefly crossed the yellow line to avoid a large snow bank that had piled up on the right side of the road. T, 53-54.

In making the left hand turn, the Explorer used the appropriate left-turn-only lane, the used T, 74. Officer Richardson appropriate directional. continued following the Explorer as it turned onto Stevens Street, again briefly crossing the yellow line. Officer Richardson continued to follow the T.56. Explorer for another mile, satisfied that it had not made any "particularly dangerous or unsafe" maneuvers justifying immediate intercession. He saw no swerving, speeding, or crossing the yellow line, despite the road having significant twists and turns. T.72-77.

Finally, Officer Richardson activated his lights, and the Explorer immediately decelerated, coming to a gradual stop without striking the curb. When the officer requested his license and registration, Mr. Wolfe retrieved them without difficulty. Despite the other occupants of the car being rowdy and yelling, Mr. Wolfe treated the situation with appropriate seriousness, and answered the officer's questions about where he had been and whether he had consumed alcohol honestly; he had been at a restaurant and a club, and he had consumed a few beers. T.82-90. Officer Richardson testified that he observed indicia of consumption, made the arrest, and booked Mr. Wolfe at the station. Mr. Wolfe did not fall, was alert during the ride, and slept briefly at the station. T.95, 99.

IV. Statement Of Issues Of Law Raised By The Appeal

- 1. Whether Commonwealth v. Downs, 53 Mass. App. Ct. 195 (2001) was wrongly decided insofar as it allows an irrelevant issue to be interjected into deliberations over the defendant's objection; this is the only issue that was preserved, T. 126-27;
- 2. Whether the inclusion of multiple types of testing in a Downs instruction that is followed by comments regarding a defendant not testifying was reversible error; and
- 3. Whether the prosecutor relying on facts not in evidence to bolster weak evidence of impairment was reversible error.

V. Brief Argument

a. Downs Was Wrongly Decided And Should Be Reversed

In Commonwealth v. Downs, 53 Mass. App. Ct. 195 (2001), the Appeals Court reasoned that "without some form of a limiting instruction concerning the breathalyzer, a jury very well could rely upon their common knowledge and engage in . . . speculation," and held that "[i]t was, therefore, not incorrect for the trial judge to . . . instruct[the jury] that they were not to think about or otherwise consider the fact that no evidence was offered concerning the breathalyzer."

Id. at 199. This holding should be revisited and overruled because the reasoning underlying it is flawed.

It is incorrect that, in the absence of a Downs instruction, an OUI jury are "without some form of a limiting instruction concerning the breathalyzer." Juries are uniformly instructed that they "are to decide what the facts are solely from the evidence admitted in this case, and not from suspicion or conjecture," Criminal Model Jury Instructions For Use In The District Court, § 2220 (2009); T.154. This instruction concerns all matters that do not come into evidence.

The virtue of such a general instruction is that it makes the apposite point without focusing the jury on the evidence whose absence invites speculation.

Ample research indicates that a limiting instruction focused on the matter to be disregarded is very likely to invite improper speculation on that very matter.²

See e.g., Joel D. Lieberman & Jamie Arndt, Understanding The Limits Of Limiting Instructions:

Moreover, the jury are already instructed not to speculate on matters not in evidence, so Downs itself is a derogation from the "presum[ption] that a jury understands and follows limiting instructions." Downs, 53 Mass. App. Ct. 198. Because the law trusts juries to follow limiting instructions, courts should not comment on a matter not in evidence, over a defendant's objection, unless and until the jury inform the court that they are struggling with that matter's absence, as the jury did in Mr. Wolfe's first trial.

The admission of "refusal evidence violate[s] the Social Psychological Explanations for the Failures of Instructions to Disregard Pretrial Publicity and Other Inadmissible Evidence, 6 Psychology, Public Policy, and Law 677, 678, 686 (2000) ("[A] large body of research indicates that jurors have great difficultly ignoring information once they have become aware of it. . . . With few exceptions, empirical research has repeatedly demonstrated that . . . limiting instructions are controlling unsuccessful at jurors' cognitive processes."); John Rafael Perez, Managing Fear-Based Derogation in Murder Trials, 43 Notre Dame Journal of LEGISLATION 1, 29 (2016) ("These common practices reveal an implicit understanding by litigators that judicial instructions and clarifications may not serve as a complete panacea for the influence of evidence."); Adam H. Kurland, Providing a Federal Criminal Defendant With a Unilateral Right to a Bench Trial: A Renewed Call to Amend Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 23(a), 26 U.C. DAVIS L. REV. 309, 337 (1993) ("[E]ven with a limiting instruction, the jury will likely use the evidence in a manner that the law does not sanction and be swayed by the evidence to a greater degree than would be the case if they only considered the evidence of the actual events").

privilege against self-incrimination." Opinion of the Justices to the Senate, 412 Mass. 1201, 1211 (1992). Over objection, the jury were instructed specifically regarding tests that Mr. Wolfe had refused. Such error requires reversal unless harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Commonwealth v. Grady, 474 Mass. 715, 716 (2016).

The Downs instruction in this case was demonstrably The jury in the defendant's mistrial prejudicial. received virtually identical evidence as the second jury, with defense counsel twice refreshing prosecution witnesses to ensure consistency. T.68, 86-87. difference is that the jury that did not convict Mr. Wolfe also did not hear any specific information about a breathalyzer test until they asked about it. 138-39). 3 Driving home this prejudice is the fact that, Section V.(b.)(i.), the discussed infra at as prosecution's evidence of intoxication was very slight.

The constitutional dimension of the Downs instructions also heightens the importance of allowing a defendant to elect, in the first instance, whether his jury hear specific references to refused tests. When a citizen decides to pay the price that the law requires of him to exercise his right not to have evidence he was compelled to furnish used against him at trial, M.G.L. c. 90, § 24(f)(1) (180-day license suspension), that decision should not be disturbed by a judicial instruction about the very evidence he refused to furnish, at least until there is a question from the jury regarding such evidence.

b. The Court Deviated from Downs Erroneously

The Downs instruction here mentioned "breath test[s], blood test[s and] field sobriety test[s]."

T.166. By referring specifically to three tests, the court heightened the likelihood that the jury were told of at least one test that, absent the Downs instruction, they would not have considered.

The court then immediately followed its Downs instruction with repeated references to Mr. Wolfe's "absolute right not to testify." T.166-67. A Downs instruction is reversible error if it refers to a decision not to submit to testing, so its proximity to repeated references to Mr. Wolfe's decision not to take the stand irreparably increased the risk that the jury would infer that he had decided also not to submit to breathalyzer, blood, and field-sobriety testing, and would use that inference as a basis to convict him.

This is tantamount to an instruction that "a person does not have to take [a breathalyzer test]." Com. v. Gibson, 82 Mass. App. Ct. 834, 837 (2012) (reversing case for unpreserved Downs error). Moreover, the "Commonwealth's proof of impaired operation here was not strong." Id. Reversal should result because, "the error here is constitutional in nature, [] is one that our courts have deemed prejudicial to defendants," and "given the significance of the error and prejudice [there is] no reason why counsel would not have insisted on a correct instruction." Id.

c. The Prosecutor Relied on Facts not in Evidence to Bolster Weak Evidence of Impairment

The prosecutor twice referred to facts not in evidence during his closing argument that went to the weakest issue in the prosecution's case: impairment. First the prosecutor told the jury that "the odor of alcohol was so strong that when he was brought into the booking station, the booking station was filled with the odor of alcohol." T.149. Then he stated that [Mr. Wolfe] was having difficulty even dialing a phone. In fact, he couldn't even use his own cell phone. And this was not because of the cell phone signal issue. He just sat there and he was looking at his phone. He didn't even know how to turn it on, and he just looked at it.

T.150. These comments have no evidentiary support.

Regarding the odor of alcohol, neither of the officers testified that it "filled" the booking station. Instead, the arresting officer testified to the odor at the scene, T.57, and the booking officer initially seemed confused by the question ("Odor?"). T.62. The booking officer then stated that he noticed the odor of alcohol, but not that it filled the station. T.63.

Regarding Mr. Wolfe's cell phone, the evidence was that there were often signal issues because of the station's construction, and that Mr. Wolfe's phone would not turn on. T.65. There was no evidence that Mr. Wolfe did not know how to turn his phone on, and there was evidence contradicting the prosecutor's assertion that Mr. Wolfe's phone difficulties were not due to a cell phone signal issue.

[For closing-argument errors, the Court] considers (1) whether the defendant seasonably objected; (2) whether the error was limited to collateral issues or went to the heart of the case; (3) what specific or general instructions the judge gave the jury which may have mitigated the mistake; and (4) whether the error, in the circumstances, possibly made a difference in the jury's conclusions.

Com. v. Arroyo, 442 Mass. 135, 147 (2004)(quotation omitted). Here, while there was no objection, the other three factors bode heavily in Mr. Wolfe's favor.

These comments went to the central issue of impairment. Evidence that a person's entrance into a police station filled the station with the odor of alcohol, and that a person did not know how to turn on his cell phone, tends convincingly to prove impairment. Also, there were no specific curative instructions.

The prejudiced caused by these comments shows that they "possibly made a difference in the jury's conclusions." Arroyo, 442 Mass. 147. The impairment evidence was weak and, while the officers testified to typical indicia of drinking, there was little evidence that drinking had any effect on Mr. Wolfe's driving.

The only evidence of impaired driving was crossing the yellow line to avoid encroaching snow banks, and this is equally if not more likely to have been an instance of responsibly avoiding a dangerous road obstacle as it is to have been impaired driving. Cf.

Commonwealth v. O'Brien, 305 Mass. 393, 400 (1940)

("When the evidence tends equally to sustain either of two inconsistent propositions, neither of them can be said to have been established by legitimate proof.").

The arresting office was forced to admit that what first drew his attention to Mr. Wolfe was a broken taillight, not anything about his driving. T.70. When he followed Mr. Wolfe, he saw him appropriately use his turn signal, deviate from his lane only to avoid encroaching snow banks, and remain within the speed limit. Of particular note, Mr. Wolfe's driving was so safe that the officer opted to allow him to continue driving on a winding road for a mile late at night before pulling him over.

Once he was pulled over, Mr. Wolfe exhibited appropriate seriousness, honestly answered questions about where he had been and what he had been doing, and retrieved the requested paperwork with dispatch. He remained calm and alert during the ride to the station and, at around 3 AM, slept briefly at the station. While this evidence provides sound bases on which reasonably to doubt Mr. Wolfe's guilt, the jurors may have been swayed to improperly suppress that doubt by the prosecutor's assertions that Mr. Wolfe smelled so strongly of alcohol, and could not turn on his phone.

Exacerbating this prejudice, the prosecutor distracted the jury from the dearth of impairment evidence by framing his case, not in terms of impairment, but instead in terms of drinking in itself. The prosecutor did not even mention impairment in his brief opening, and instead mentioned only drinking, and getting behind the wheel. T.46 ("On the night of February 13th, 2015 he made a choice. He made the choice to drink and get behind a wheel. That led to arrest of him for OUI and now he's sitting here today."). This obscured the fact that impairment, not drinking and driving, must be proven. Gibson, 82 Mass. App. Ct. 837.

"A substantial likelihood of a miscarriage of justice exists unless we are substantially confident that, if the error had not been made, the jury verdict would have been the same." Arroyo, 442 Mass. 147-48. Whereas there was "evidence supporting Arroyo's guilt, including his statements before and after the crimes and the evidence linking him to the jacket worn by the assailant," id., the officer in this case followed Mr. Wolfe and observed little evidence of impairment. The prosecutor's remarks may very well have had an impact.4

VI. Statement of Reasons For Direct Appellate Review

Direct Appellate Review should be granted because the instant case presents questions of law concerning the Constitution of the Commonwealth and questions of such public interest that justice requires a final determination by the full Supreme Judicial Court.

The constitutional question presented by this case is whether art. 12's guarantee that a person will not be convicted on evidence they were compelled to furnish is violated by a judge's repeated references to the very evidence that the law compels. The Massachusetts Constitution differs from its federal counterpart with regard to refusal evidence and, especially in the current jurisprudential atmosphere, it is important to reaffirm the extent of constitutional protections afforded to the citizens of this Commonwealth.

This is a matter of public interest because Massachusetts citizens regularly elect to subject themselves to the punishment of license suspension in order to give effect to their right not to have evidence that they were compelled to furnish used against them. Giving full effect to that right requires also that those who have refused to furnish such evidence be able to elect, in the first instance, whether their jury will ever hear anything about the tests they refused to submit to. Where a case involves references to all three popular types of testing (breath, blood, field sobriety), and a person who submitted to no testing at all, it presents a compelling occasion to revisit Downs.

Finally, this question requires a final determination by the full Supreme Judicial Court because the Appeals Court has recently been asked to revisit Downs, and it declined to do so. See Com. v. Medeiros, 87 Mass. App. Ct. 1138, 2015 WL 4579317, at *2 (2015)(1:28 disposition), review den'd, 473 Mass. 1102.

VII. Conclusion

For the above-stated reasons, the court should grant direct appellate review, and reverse the Trial Court's judgments on Mr. Wolfe's convictions.

Respectfully submitted,
The Defendant-Appellant,

v.

MICHAEL WOLFE

MOTION IN LIMINE TO PRECLUDE INTRODUCTION OF ATTEMTPED PORTABLE BREATHALYZER TEST

The defendant, Michael Wolfe, is charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. He moves to preclude the commonwealth from introducing evidence of, or making reference to, the failed administration of the Portable Breathalyzer Test (PBT) to the defendant by the arresting officer.

As grounds for this motion, the defendant states:

- 1. The PBT test apparently has a scientific basis that is not within the common knowledge of a lay person; it therefore requires expert testimony. See Commonwealth v. Sands, 424 Mass. 184, 188 (1997).
- 2. The commonwealth cannot lay the proper foundation to demonstrate that the PBT field sobriety test is generally accepted in the scientific community as a reliable indicator of the correlation between the consumption of alcohol and the results of the PBT. See id. at 188-89.
- 3. The arresting officer is not qualified to testify as an expert witness as to the scientific basis, reliability and general acceptance of the PBT test in the scientific community. See id.
- 4. The PBT does not comply with the Code of Massachusetts regulations or the Massachusetts General Laws regarding the administration of breathalyzer tests in the commonwealth. See 501 C.M.R. 2.00-2.20; M.G.L. ch. 90, § 24K.
- 5. Although in this case, the commonwealth is not seeking to introduce the numerical results of the breathalyzer test, it is seeking to introduce observations made during the administration of the test, relating to the test, as well as the arresting officers' opinions about Mr. Wolfe's failure to follow directions.

3/24/16 - ALCONED -

6. Because a PBT does not comply with the Code of Massachusetts regulations or the Massachusetts General Laws regarding the administration of breathalyzer tests, any evidence that would have been obtained through the administration of this test would have been inadmissible.

7. Where a breath test is not admissible in Court, the Appeals Court has noted that consent and refusal are irrelevant to the proceedings at hand. Commonwealth v. Curley, 78 Mass. App. Ct. 163, fn 12 (2010) (quoting Commonwealth v. Sabourin, 48 Mass. App. Ct. 505, 506, 722 N.E.2d 994, 995 (2000) ("In another context, this court has held that '[t]he consent to take the test impliedly contemplates the taking of a valid test (one that would be admissible in court)."").

8. The commonwealth should not be allowed to benefit from highly prejudicial testimony regarding the administration of the breathalyzer test without making an initial showing that, if a sample had been produced, the test results would have been valid; i.e.

Massachusetts Declaration of Rights

The defendant requests that the commonwealth be precluded from introducing evidence of or making reference to the administration of the PBT administered to the defendant by the arresting officer. This court should exclude all evidence and testimony regarding the breathalyzer test because any probative value that such evidence would have, which is simply cumulative to other observations regarding Mr. Wolfe's ability to understand and follow directions, is far outweighed by the prejudice to the Defendant, and would ultimately deny Mr. Wolfe his right to due process, to a fair trial, to present a defense, and to effective assistance of counsel under the Fifth, Sixth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution, and Article Twelve of the

MOTION TO EXCLUDE REFUSAL EVIDENCE REGARDING FIELD SOBRIETY TESTS AND BREATH TEST

Now comes the Defendant, Michael Wolfe, in the above-entitled action and moves that this Honorable Court exclude any reference(s) to defendant's refusal to submit to field sobriety tests and the chemical breath test, and additionally, any testimony or references to these tests as OUI detection methods in general. Mr. Wolfe was asked by Officer Richardson of the Marlborough Police Department to submit to field sobriety tests. In response, Mr. Wolfe stated he would not feel comfortable taking the tests, and declined to do so. After his arrest, when offered a chemical breath test at the Marlborough Police Station, Mr. Wolfe also declined to take this test, signing the consent form to that effect.

As grounds for this motion, the Defendant states that "[i]t is well settled in Massachusetts that a defendant's refusal to submit to a blood alcohol or field sobriety test is inadmissible at trial." Commonwealth v. Healy, 452 Mass. 510, 513 (2008) citing Commonwealth v. Blais, supra at 299-300; Commonwealth v. Zevitas, 418 Mass. 677, 683-684 (1994). Both the Appellate Court and the Supreme Judicial Court have held "the admissibility of such a refusal would place a defendant in a coercive 'Catch-22' situation: Take the test and 'furnish' incriminating real evidence against oneself, or refuse and produce adverse testimonial evidence of consciousness of guilt." Commonwealth v. Brown, 83 Mass. App. Ct. 772, 777 (2013) citing Commonwealth v. Lopes, 459 Mass. at 170, quoting from Opinion of the Justices, supra at 1211.

ALLOW BD

Therefore, the defendant requests that the commonwealth be precluded from introducing evidence of or making any reference to Mr. Wolfe's refusal to take either the field sobriery tests or the chemical breath test. Exclusion of any testimony or reference to these OUI detection methods in general, is further necessary given the implication that putting such information before the jury would have. If these standard detection methods are mentioned, it would lead the jury to speculate and come to the conculsion of refusal when they do not hear evidence regading either. This court should exclude all evidence and testimony regarding the refusal and these tests as it would ultimately deny Mr. Wolfe his right to due process, to a fair trial, to present a defense, and to effective assistance of counsel under the Fifth, Sixth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution, and Article Twelve of the Massachusetts Declaration of Rights.
